

Attorney Docket No.: 6133.214-US

Please add the following Abstract to the pending application:--

ABSTRACT

A system for assisting in blood glucose control of a human patient is disclosed. One aspect of the disclosure provides for a system that allows inputs of various parameters related to the patient and outputs a control signal containing information relating to how the patient may achieve a desired blood glucose level. The output signal may be transmitted directly to a device that administers an agent, such as insulin, to the patient. The signal may contain the requisite dosing information to achieve the desired result.
